

Studio History Exchange

A group of art history students were asked to look at a painting and describe in writing what they saw. They were instructed to be very specific in their descriptions. The text was then handed over to a studio art course. They were asked to recreate the image based on the art history student's written description. Their images were then shared with the art history students and discussion between the studio students and art history students was conducted.